REPURPOSED TACK FACTORY UNVEILED WITH GRAND OPENING

BY BOB DEMAREE

After production stopped at Tower Manufacturing in the fall of 2007, there were occasional inquiries about bringing life back to the site, but over time all interest seemed to fade away as the building sat empty and deteriorating for more than a decade.

On Thursday, the building's new owners and old — as well as a big turnout of local residents and Indiana Lt. Gov. Suzanne Crouch — celebrated a rebirth of the old factory with a grand opening and ribbon-cutting of the new Riverside Tower Lofts, marking not just a rejuvenation

Farm not zoned for swap meets or flea markets

BY MARK CAMPBELL

Several residents as well as local first responders were before Madison's Board of Zoning Appeals Tuesday to complain about a property owner they say is once again creating a hazardous situation by operating a commercial festival enterprise on rural property zoned Residential Agriculture.

Zoning Appeals, which has authority over conditional uses of the property located at 2357 North K Road based on its location within the City of Madison's two-mile buffer zone, has heard complaints about the owners and how they are using their family farm in the past when the property was used as a venue for mud runs, ATV drags, concerts and flea markets. Neighboring residents then cited loud noise, gunfire, huge bonfires, camping and vehicles parked in a manner along North K Road that not only damaged the highway but created a safety hazard by blocking access to fire trucks and ambulances.

After one heavy metal concert was held at the site on the spur of the moment, residents headed off a plan by the owners to lease the site for a series of heavy metal concert weekends with camping several months ago and they were back again Tuesday to inform the BZA that the site was recently used for a flea market, animal swap, petting zoo and camping attracting 400 to 500

COVID-19 vaccine approved for children ages 12 and older

BY BOB DEMAREE

Hoosiers and Kentuckians ages 12 and older are now eligible to receive the COVID-19 vaccine following FDA expansion of the vaccine's Emergency Use Authorization for persons ages 12 to 15 years.

The Jefferson County Health Department began offering Pfizer vaccine to that age group on Friday. The Pfizer vaccine is the only one of the three COVID-19 vaccines that is currently approved for use by those under the age of 18.

"The Pfizer vaccine is safe and effective at preventing COVID-19 and was well tolerated by adolescents participating in clinical trials," said state Health Commissioner Kris Box, M.D., FACOG. "This vaccine is the next step toward getting back to normal for children who have missed out on so much over the past year, including school and extracurricular activities. Those who are fully vaccinated will no longer have to quarantine if they are a close contact of a positive case unless they develop symptoms of COVID. That is welcome news for both children and parents."

An adult must accompany children age 12 to 15 to the appointment and parental consent is required for minors.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Center for Disease Control and President Joe Biden both confirmed Thursday that face mask wearing is no longer necessary — indoors or

MCS OK's $8M bond for Anderson expansion, MCHS solar project

BY BOB DEMAREE

Two major school construction projects — financed by a single $8 million bond — moved forward Wednesday when Madison Consolidated School Board unanimously approved a resolution to build an addition onto the west side of Anderson Elementary and another to develop solar efficiencies at Madison Consolidated High School.

The resolutions were adopted following a public hearing at Wednesday's school board meeting held in the Anderson Elementary gymnasium.

The only public comment came from Anderson Elementary teacher Cindy Robinson, who said, "I have been a teacher for almost 40 years and you don't know how much we appreciate what you're doing. What you're doing for us and the children is phenomenal. You listened to what we had to say and that is appreciated. You have changed our work lives so we can serve the children and that's what we're here for. We appreciate you and what you're doing."

Jason Tanselle, senior manager at Baker Tilly, explained the projects will be done by issuing $8 million in bond without an increase in debt service.

"They are replacing ones that are already returning," Tanselle said, adding that it is more efficient to combine the two projects into one bond.

people with many parking along North K Road and several other events have been scheduled for the rest of the year.

Those opposing the usage say the events not only cause disruption and excessive noise in an area zoned for farming and homesteading but pose a danger should the site or its neighbors need emergency assistance because North K Road, no more than 12 feet in some locations, is not wide enough for an 8-foot-wide fire truck or ambulance when it’s clogged with other vehicles parked along the edges all the way to Old State road 62.

In addition to being used for a car show, parts swap, animal swap and petting zoo, they say visitors are being charged for parking and the petting zoo, and even commemorative T-Shirts are marketing the site as a Indiana Flea Market and Family Off Road Park.

Jason Goley, who farms property on North K Road, noted the group is already being followed by up to 2,800 people on social media so the enterprise appears to be growing in an area that is already overburdened by the crowds.

“It’s gridlock all down Old State Road 62,” Goley said, adding that although the property does have an agriculture designation, some of the animals at the swap are “exotics” and “not raised on a farm.”

Robert Black, chief of Madison Township Fire Department, has responded to calls at the property in the past and said the owners and their guests have been “very non-compliant” and resistant to intervention even when the situation warranted a response by firefighters and EMTs. He said in the past firefighters have encountered armed, intoxicated, threatening subjects and the current response policy is that fire and ambulance personnel and equipment will not enter onto the property until escorted by law enforcement.

The BZA took the comments under advisement and agreed to investigate the complaints further but with the next swap meet scheduled for May 22 that action will need to take place sooner than the board’s next meeting on June 8. It was agreed that BZA will schedule a special meeting and have the board’s attorney in attendance for an executive session at 5:30 p.m. on Monday, May 17.

In other business, the board approved or reapproved several conditional use permits including a request by Todd Boone to use a fenced lot next to the former Chapman Printing Building, 107 East Second Street, which is now a recording studio and offices for the Madison Music Movement, as a possible site for food trucks or a concert venue.

Boone said the plans are still preliminary — he still needs to go before the Historic Board for some approval — and he is working with the city building inspector to follow all local codes and requirements.

The resolutions passed cited an estimated cost of $4 million for each project.

“It’s very important to know that the tax rate is not increasing,” said Bonnie Hensler, director of Finance and Human Resources for the school district.

Studebaker explained that the 10,000-square-foot addition to Anderson Elementary will include four new classrooms, a media center, conference room, two new student restrooms and two new faculty restrooms. Additionally, there will be a hybrid office area for Speech Language Pathology, special education and intervention educators in which the offices can also be used as meeting space for small groups with a lobby/waiting area in the middle. The school’s current media center will be transformed into an area for science and art.

Studebaker expects to receive bids for the projects this fall with construction work to begin in the winter or spring with completion by the fall of 2022 or January of 2023. He said “given where (the addition) is going, I am not expecting (construction) to interfere with what they’re doing” in the existing portion of Anderson Elementary. He noted that work to refurbish the existing media center into a science/art room could occur in the summer of 2023 when classes are not in session.

The energy efficiency project will involve replacing a section of the high school roof and installing solar panels that will provide long term energy savings. It also involves installing more efficient LED lighting at the high school baseball and softball fields and track field events area similar to what is already in place at the football field and track.

The board approved an energy saving contract with Johnson-Melloh Solutions to handle all aspects of managing the project at a cost of $2,865,229 for the high school. The board also approved a design phase professional service agreement with Johnson-Melloh for $594,725 for Anderson Elementary.

Studebaker said there will also be consideration of work at Madison Junior High School with its heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) system which he said there “have been some issues” in maintaining comfortable temperatures. Additionally, he said the corporation would also like to expand the key-less entry system currently in place at the central office and high school to other buildings in the school district.

Studebaker said that solar installations ultimately will result in energy savings for the school district, which he said a percentage of will be given back toward teacher salaries.

Going to the dogs

Dear Annie: My father-in-law died unexpectedly a few years ago. Since then my brother-in-law's family has put my meek mother-in-law in an uncomfortable predicament. These nieces and nephews who all live out of town seem to think it's OK to bring their dogs every time they visit. Some have more than one. When they are all there at once, it's really a dog zoo. For the past year, my husband and I have had the excuse of COVID-19 to avoid these gatherings. Frankly, we can't stand all the dogs. More importantly than our feelings, though, my mother-in-law does not want them bringing their dogs. She is too sweet to say anything, for fear they won't visit. My nieces and nephews are grown adults at this point; they all make very good money and could afford to kennel these pets. Should we tell them how much this upsets her? She is constantly having to steam clean her rugs because of this and other unnecessary chores. — Do We Tell in Wisconsin

Dear Do We Tell: You can try speaking up for your mother-in-law — but if she's that squeamish about confrontation, she'll probably insist that the dogs are fine with her. Then you'll have awkwardly inserted yourself into the situation for no reason. Encourage her instead to stand up for herself. It sounds like she's afraid of being lonely, so remind her how much you and your spouse love and support her. And pay her some visits when your nieces, nephews and the rest of the pack aren't around.

Dear Annie: I'd like to address this to "Crying Myself to Sleep" and other women who are in love with men who they suspect don't love them back: I encourage you to think about a man's actions versus his words. It is deeply painful when you love a charming man with your whole heart then come to realize that he's deceived you again and again. You think maybe, if you just wait and show him even more love, he will come around — and that's exactly what he wants you to keep doing. Love yourself enough to drop a man who has caused you to cry so often. Please know from a woman who has gone through this, it is freeing. Once I started looking for an honest man, I, eventually, found one. We're not perfect together, but it's 100 times better than the bread crumbs I had from my deceiver. I wish you the self-love to drop your deceiver, and the joy that you can experience either on your own or with an honest man. — Love Yourself, Too

Dear Love: It's always helpful for people in the thick of heartache to hear from others who have made it through. Printing your letter to offer "Crying" and others some much-needed hope.

Being the bigger person

Dear Annie: I have been married to my husband for three years. We own a home together and live a nice life. He had been single for about eight years before meeting me. He had two other serious relationships with women who his children didn't like. His youngest, 16, lived with us for two years and made life hard. He didn't follow rules, and he clearly didn't like me.

care. He says we are in a relationship with each other, not the kids. But to me, I can't imagine his leaving me on Christmas every year or sneaking — fast-forward — to his grandchildren's birthday parties. Would it make more sense to move on because I would never be happy with this, or is it worth sticking out in hopes the girls will change? — His Children Hate Me

ANNIE LANE
DEAR ANNIE

As a result, his married adult daughter has been very disrespectful to me in our home. It got so bad that I told my husband she isn't welcome if she can't be respectful. It's been over a year now since she has come over. In that time, the youngest turned 18 and moved in with her. We live separate family lives. I'm not welcome or invited to holidays or birthdays. I come from a divorced family, and regardless of my feelings about my parents' spouses, I am respectful of my parents' relationships and homes. My husband doesn't

Dear His Children Hate Me: If you just wait for his children to change, and you don't change yourself or do some introspection as to why they treat you the way they do, then things will not change. Saying that your 16-year-old stepson was disrespectful and didn't follow rules is not really understanding adolescents. Of course, respect is always the goal of parenting a teenager, but cutting them a little slack when they are trying to find their way from childhood to adulthood is also very important. Instead of interpreting his refusal to follow rules as a direct attack on you, consider that he's trying to figure himself out. Remember, you are the adult. The more understanding and empathy you can bring, the more receptive they will be to reconciliation. Try to put yourself in his and your stepdaughters' shoes. Someone has to extend the olive branch. Be the bigger person for the sake of your marriage and — fast-forward — for the wonderful family and grandkids you will celebrate holidays with together.

Dear Annie: Unfortunately, like a lot of people, I have sent out too many sympathy cards this past year. And many families opting for no visitation and sometimes even no services, it's hard to come up with something other than flowers or food. I have copied an idea from a friend when my own mother passed away years ago. I now include stamps with my card. You can buy forever stamps for around $10. They fit nicely in a card and are very practical and useful. Plus, they last "forever," so people can use them as they're needed. — Sympathy Stamps

Dear Stamps: What a great idea. Thank you for sharing!

Madison Prom Court

Madison Consolidated High School's prom is tonight and the prom court is competing for the crowns by raising money for charity with those who raise the most crowned prince and princess and king and queen. of the building, but the development of more affordable housing for local residents.

“When together we work together, we can do great things,” said Crouch, who praised the efforts that made the project a reality. “The government can light a path,” she said, but it is “the hard work of Madison and the partnerships” that indicates “what can be done when we work together.”

Crouch also called on a quote from author Helen Keller: “Alone we can do so little; together we can do so much.”

Riverside Tower Lofts, developed in a massive building that had long been known as the Tack Factory, will provide 42 one-bedroom and eight two-bedroom units for low income seniors age 62 and older.

“We are celebrating quality housing for seniors,” Crouch said. Madison Mayor Bob Courtney said the grand opening is exciting for the seniors and the community.

“These are beautiful homes and they are affordable,” he said. “This is changing lives of people in our community.”

Courtney noted that the development is particularly important in Madison where he said real estate prices have increased 30% in the last year. Citing statistics from Insurify that rank Indiana in the top 10 real estate markets in the nation and information from the Indiana Association of Realtors that place Madison second in the nation in post-pandemic real estate boon, Courtney said the city needs projects like Riverside Tower Lofts and others.

“Affordable housing is needed in Madison now more than ever,” Courtney said.

Much of the credit for driving the project forward went to the Stellar Community designation the city received in 2017 and the awareness and financial benefits that program provides.

“Once we were designated as Stellar, people all over started to notice us. It brought attention to what we had,” said Camille Fife, former preservation planner for the City of Madison.

The project received funding from Indiana Housing and Community Development Authority through the Stellar Community Housing Tax Credits, City of Madison and the City of Madison Redevelopment Commission.

The property was developed by Denton Floyd Real Estate Group, and Clayton Pace, director of development for company, said it “was only because of Stellar and the vision of everyone here today” that the rejuvenation and adaptive reuse of the property was achieved.

He admitted that it was a challenge to transform the Old Tack Factory into apartments. “Adaptive reuse can be extremely difficult” but he credited Brandon Denton, co-founder and partner of Denton Floyd, for his vision on what it could become. “It could not have been done without effort and passion.”

On hand for the event were Denny Spinner, executive director of Indiana Office of Community and Rural Affairs, and Jacob Sipe, executive director of the Indiana Housing and Community Development Authority. Additionally, Ginny Welch, whose husband, former Mayor Damon Welch, was instrumental in the city’s efforts to revitalize the property, and Andrew Forrester, former Community Relations Director for the City of Madison.

Fife also credited Glenn Perkins of D&H Holdings, who had purchased the building from Tower Manufacturing in 2008. Even though Perkins’ hopes for the building never reached fruition, she said he made sure the structure remained intact.

“He had offers for a lot of money to demolish the building and to use the timber,” Fife said. “He did not do that. He held out.”

Also on hand was Bob Cooke, the last owner of Tower Manufacturing who had worked there 34 years, first as president before purchasing the company in 2001.

“Business was good in the beginning,” said Cooke, but “was a losing battle” in the end as the company could not compete with overseas competition, leading to the closing of Tower Manufacturing after 111 years.

But even with the Old Tack Factory gone, Thursday was a beautiful day for Cooke just seeing the property at 1001 West Second Street revitalized and ready to be enjoyed well into the future.

“I had wanted to see something done with it,” said Cooke, noting that watching the ribbon cutting brought a deep sense gratitude to everyone involved who made it possible.

Boggs steps down as girls basketball coach, AD at Switzerland County

Next post is SCMS principal

BY DAVID CAMPBELL
When Mark Boggs took over the Switzerland County girls basketball program in 2017, he knew he was in for a bumpy ride. Just three years removed from a regional runner-up appearance, the Pacers were in the middle of a rebuild with a young roster about to get younger. Switzerland increased its win total each of the next four years culminating in an 18-win campaign this past season that ended in a loss to South Ripley in the sectional championship game. Little did anybody, including the coach, know at the time that game would be Boggs' last on the Switzerland sideline. Boggs officially resigned on Wednesday as head girls basketball coach, assistant principal and athletic director at the school to become principal at Switzerland County Middle School. It was not an easy decision for the coach, but it was one he felt ultimately needed to made. "I love this staff and everybody in this building. They welcomed me with open arms and that is hard to leave," Boggs said. "Add in the girls basketball job, and it was even tougher. I love those girls and I would do anything for them and it's definitely difficult to leave a situation like that. They're just daughters of your own. I'm going to miss them."

Boggs didn't have much time to make the decision. Sean McGarvey informed Boggs last Friday that he was stepping down as principal of the middle school to go back into the classroom and four hours later, Superintendent Rod Hite was on the phone offering Boggs

Switzerland County's Mark Boggs led the Pacers to 18 wins and the sectional championship game this season. He will step down as coach, athletic director and assistant principal at the high school to become principal at Switzerland County Middle School.

Orrill tosses no-hitter vs. Jeffersonville but loses, 1-0, in HHC semifinals

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT
Ben Orrill officially finished with a no-hitter but Madison ended up on the wrong end of a 1-0 score in what was an instant classic showdown with Jeffersonville in the semifinals of the Hoosier Hills Conference baseball tournament on Wednesday. Orrill was literally unhittable for the Cubs despite striking out only two Red Devils. The sophomore let his defense do the work and the result was a no-hitter that stretched into extra innings. Jeffersonville finally broke through with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth. The Red Devils' Brett Denby drew a one-out walk and stole second with the throw from catcher Zander Vonch glancing off Denby's leg into centerfield. The Jeff runner took off and rounded third and headed for home, sliding in with the winning run just ahead of a bullet throw to the plate by Madison's Trenton Barnes. "It was a great game. The play that we lost on was just one of those things; it was really nobody's fault," Madison coach Tim Armstrong said. "The kids played hard but they also know that they should have won and they now know that they can play with anybody." Orrill (5-2) officially went eight and a third innings allowing no hits, one unearned run and walking four. Madison had five hits in the contest but couldn't string any of those together to score the crucial run. Orrill was 2-for-4, Zach Forner had a double and Vonch and Luke McCarty each had singles. Madison, now 16-7, hosted New Albany on Friday in the HHC third-place game and plays Class A No. 3 Oldenburg today, also at Gary O'Neral Field. The Cubs then host New Washington on Tuesday.

TENNIS ROUNDUP

Lady Rebels roll over CAI, 5-0

BY COURIER STAFF REPORT
Southwestern girls tennis posted a 5-0 win over Christian Academy of Indiana on Thursday in New Albany. The Rebels had little trouble in sweeping all five matches, not losing a single set and only a handful of games. "Everyone came out and played strong matches today. Our movement is getting a lot better overall and not so much standing and watching," Southwestern coach Kenny Garrett said. "I always push movement and staying on your toes and we get flat-footed a lot." In singles, Elle Ford scored a 6-2, 6-1 win over Elana Hamby at No. 1 while Julia Worcester improved to 15-1 on the season with a 6-0, 6-2 win over Anna Neal at No. 2. In doubles, Autumn Harmon and Chloe Adcock defeated Adeline Baldwin and Maddie Paul 6-0, 6-3 at No. 1 and Alli Voorhies and Syrenia Hardy beat Rebekah Wright and Lacy Kendall 6-0, 6-1 at No. 2. Southwestern, now 13-3 on the season, competes in the Southern Indiana Tennis Conference Tournament today at the home courts of both Shawe and Madison starting at 9 a.m. The Rebels wrap the regular season at Lawrenceburg on Monday.

SHAWE FALLS AT OLDENBURG
Shawe's girls tennis team dropped a 5-0 loss to Oldenburg at Batesville High School on Thursday. "Our No. 2 and No. 3 singles had very close matches so the team match score is deceiving," Shawe coach Natalie Hill said. "Phoebe Grote and Lauren Grote both played with grit and determination and almost defeated their opponents. Both lost in a super 10-point tie-breaker in place of a third set. We are very proud of how they battled." In singles, Abigail Hill lost 6-3, 6-0 to Teresa Wanstrath at No. 1, Phoebe Grote lost 7-5, 1-6, 11-9 to Mimi Wilder at No. 2, and Lauren Grote fell 6-3, 3-6, 10-6 to Izzy Price at No. 3. the job. He spent the weekend thinking it over.

“I thought about it, I prayed about it, I talked to my wife about it and my oldest child about it and on Saturday, I thought about it some more,” Boggs said. “When I woke up on Sunday, I knew that it was time to make a decision and I decided to do it.”

Boggs leaves a Switzerland County program poised for great things in the 2021-22 season.

The Pacers return their two scorers from that 18-6 team — twin sisters Jessie and Maddie Duvall — and have a young and talented group of freshmen and sophomores who got a lot of playing time this past season and are ready for a breakthrough.

“I think they are in for a whale of a season,” Boggs said. “Whoever coaches them is going to have a lot of fun.”

Switzerland was just 5-18 in the 2017-18 season, Boggs’ first year, but won 12 games the next year and 15 the year after before posting the 18-win campaign which was the most for the program since a regional runner-up campaign in 2014-15 when they won 21 games. Overall, Boggs was 50-45 at his alma mater.

The hunt for Boggs’ replacement in all three positions has already begun.

Boggs said his official duties as athletic director will carry him through June and the hope is to have a new person in place by July in order to get ready for the upcoming season.

Can designing a “private pension” plan help you survive a long retirement?

“Layin’ it on the line”

“Creating a private pension is one way to ensure that you don’t wind up outliving your money.”
– Stephen Dybwad

Everyone knows that Americans are living longer.

Unfortunately, most people have not adequately planned for the financial consequences of living long lives after leaving their jobs. Many people know that Social Security will likely not be enough to fill in the income gaps. Conventional planning envisions a person spending 10-15 years in retirement. Today, though, it’s not uncommon for people to spend 20, 30, or even 40 years in retirement.

Even those fortunate enough to have socked away money in qualified plans such as 401(k)s and IRAs are coming to terms with the fact that they may not have enough money. Such concerns are realistic and sometimes pressure seniors to put far too much of their savings at risk in the stock market or alternative investments.

How can you create a personal pension?

The volatile economic environment of post-COVID USA has many people living in fear when it comes to money. Many who sought refuge in money market funds, CDs, or bonds have watched their returns evaporate as interest has gone negative.

If this describes your situation, you might consider creating your own “personal pension plan.” By definition, a pension plan is a transfer of risk lifetime income stream that provides periodic payments throughout one’s life. Payouts are based mainly on your life expectancy at the time you decide to start receiving them.

One way to create this type of pension is by using safe money products such as annuities. For example, you could purchase an immediate annuity, giving an insurance company a chunk of your cash in exchange for a guaranteed lifetime income stream. An immediate annuity provides payouts either for the rest of your life or for a specified period.

When designing your private pension plan using an income annuity, you’ll want to answer some key questions.

- Do you want to put in a lump sum or pay monthly?
- How soon do you want to begin your payouts?
- Do you want your lifetime income stream to cover your life only, or would you like joint life coverage with your spouse?
- How do you locate the highest contractual guarantees that fit your specific goals and needs?

Creating a private pension plan using an annuity is a valuable strategy, especially if you want something in your portfolio that provides guarantees, which IRAs and 401(k)s do not.

An annuity-based private pension solves two of the most significant retirement risks: the risk of outliving your savings and market risk. When you build your pension plan using annuities, you create a steady, predictable income stream that provides you with specific guarantees and tax advantages.

Who benefits most from having a private pension?

Personal pension plans aren’t right for everyone, but they can make sense if:

1. You are more than five years from retiring.
2. You don’t like the idea of exposing your savings to risk.
3. You are in reasonably good health and ready to plan your retirement.

4. You need to do everything possible to ensure your money lasts if you have a long retirement.
5. You’re someone who likes the idea of having a guaranteed income stream when you retire.
6. You want to create diversity in your current portfolio but don’t want to expose your principal to risk.

To sum it up: Other than Social Security, most Americans don’t have any guaranteed income streams to shore up their retirement cash flow. For this reason, it has become necessary to create private pensions that can fill in the gaps and ensure a person does not run out of money before they die. Annuity products are the only financial tools available to guarantee you have a dependable income stream, regardless of how long you live after retiring.

Annuities may be the right choice for those who do not have a company pension, have not put enough money into defined plans offered by employers, or anticipate living a long time after they stop working. Annuities can also be useful for people who want to leave a legacy to loved ones or think they may have additional medical and long-term care expenses in retirement.
